Linda Avey and Anne Wojcicki have started a genetic testing company. They feel that if people know what diseases they are at risk for in the future, they will be able to take action and have a better life. Wojcicki's husband discovered from a gene test that he is at risk of getting Parkinson's disease. He found it empowering, as he now exercises more and doesn't take caffeine. The public, though, fears that insurance companies may refuse to cover people with results that indicate higher risks of certain illnesses. At the moment, it is illegal for them to do so, but that may change. Another reason why the tests have proved controversial is that they can measure only the genes that studies have linked to certain illnesses so far.

41. It is strongly implied in the passage that Anne Wojcicki's husband

- A) was tricked into having a genetic test by his wife
- B) has already got Parkinson's disease
- C) dislikes drinks with caffeine in them
- D) works for his wife's genetic testing company
- E) doesn't regret having had the genetic test

42. It can be concluded from the passage that

- A) insurance companies have a tendency to break the law
- B) the fear that the public have about genetic testing is baseless
- C) Linda Avey and Anne Wojcicki are being sponsored by insurance companies
- D) giving up caffeine may help in the prevention of Parkinson's disease
- E) Parkinson's disease is caused solely by heredity

43. It is understood from the passage that illnesses

- A) may have genetic links that are presently unknown
- B) have not affected Linda Avey or Anne Wojcicki
- C) cannot legally be studied by insurance companies
- D) such as Parkinson's disease cannot affect physically active people
- E) can be cured through a knowledge of genetics

Ventotene belongs to the group of islands known as the Pontines. During the Roman Empire, emperors such as Augustus and Tiberius considered the island's isolation perfect for exiling people to. It is thought that the poet Homer thought of Ventotene as a spot passed by by Ulysses on his long journey home. The island's restaurants keep visitors well-fed during peak season from May to October. Ventotene's size of just 1½ square kilometers makes it perfect for exploring on foot. Unlike its more popular southern neighbours in the same island group, Ischia and Capri, Ventotene has barely been touched by international tourism. It's home to a year-round population of about 600. That number increases dramatically during the summer months.

44. It is understood from the passage that Capri is

- A) occupied by tourists for longer than Ventotene
- B) one of the Pontines
- C) to the south of Ischia
- D) larger in size than Ventotene
- E) not mentioned by Homer

45. It is clear from the passage that Ventotene

- A) has nothing in common with Ischia or Capri
- B) was visited by the Roman emperors Augustus and Tiberius
- C) does not have any motorized vehicles on it
- D) is popular with visitors from May to October
- E) was first inhabited during the Roman Empire

46. We learn from the passage that Ventotene

- A) is mentioned in several of Homer's works
- B) is not stayed on by international tourists for long
- C) was used as a place of punishment in the past
- D) has a serious food supply problem in winter
- E) is not keen on having international tourists

The Scottish writer Henry Mackenzie tried to interest some publishers in his first and most famous work, The Man of Feeling, for several years, but they didn't accept it, even as a gift. Finally, he published it anonymously, and it was an instant bestseller. Its tone shows Mackenzie knew the work of Laurence Sterne and Samuel Richardson, but he didn't have Sterne's humour or Richardson's insight. A Mr. Eccles made a claim of authorship of the book, and supported it with a manuscript full of changes he'd made. Mackenzie was later officially revealed as the author, but Eccles seems to have got some people to believe in him. Mackenzie also opposed the French Revolution in many articles, most of which remained anonymous.

47. It can be understood from the passage that The Man of Feeling

- A) was not expected to be successful by the publishers that rejected it
- B) has a similar storyline to a work by Samuel Richardson
- C) includes negative remarks about the French Revolution
- D) sold more copies than all of Henry Mackenzie's other work put together
- E) was based on a manuscript that had been written by Mr. Eccles

48. It is stated in the passage that Mr. Eccles

- A) knew who had really written The Man of Feeling when it was published
- B) made some effort to back up his claim
- C) was the actual author of The Man of Feeling
- D) had tried to improve Henry Mackenzie's novel
- E) never gave up claiming to be the author of The Man of Feeling

49. We learn from the passage that Henry Mackenzie

- A) attempted to give away published articles for free
- B) put out a majority of his anti-French Revolution pieces under his own name
- C) did not want his name to appear on any of his work
- D) gave Mr. Eccles the original draft of his first novel
- E) was a less amusing writer than Laurence Sterne

The British ship the Britannic was of the same class as the Titanic. Before it could carry the normal passengers it had been designed for, it was taken over for use as a hospital ship in World War I. In 1916, off Greece, there was an explosion, and the ship soon sank. It's unknown what caused it. Witnesses claimed they saw two torpedoes heading towards the ship. But after the war, the record of a German submarine revealed that it had laid mines close to where the Britannic lies. Unlike the sinking of the Titanic, the loss of the Britannic made few headlines, and the 30 deaths unfortunately seemed insignificant in the middle of a very bloody war. Due to its extra safety features, the Britannic should in fact have remained afloat.

50. It is implied in the passage that the explosion

- A) ought not to have sunk the Britannic
- B) was seen by many eyewitnesses
- C) was recorded by a German submarine
- D) was not actually a significant one
- E) killed everyone on board the Britannic

51. It is clear from the passage that the Britannic

- A) had the same safety features as the Titanic
- B) had 30 people on board at the time of the explosion
- C) was being followed by a German submarine
- D) was never used for its original purpose
- E) was being watched by people in Greece when it exploded

52. It can be concluded from the passage that the loss of the Britannic made few headlines because

- A) the news on the war was considered more important at the time
- B) it was still unclear what had blown a hole in it
- C) ships of the Titanic's class were expected to sink
- D) nobody cared about the victims of the disaster
- E) its sinking occurred close to a foreign country

Along with a number of the other ones built in the US after the Civil War, the Sand Island Lighthouse is decaying. The expert Michael Davidson points out that it has survived many major hurricanes. He believes that it would not be standing had it been built with modern methods. In the US Civil War, the Confederate side destroyed some lighthouses to keep them out of Union hands. The lighthouse on Sand Island was one of the ones completely blown up. Davidson has compared the current condition of the Sand Island Lighthouse to a cracked teacup. He thinks it can be repaired by sealing its cracks. Yet the lack of funds for its restoration remains a challenge. Some of its supporters have some fundraising plans, though.

53. It is implied in the passage that the Sand Island Lighthouse

- A) is not the first building of its kind to occupy its site
- B) will not continue to exist for much longer
- C) was viewed as a beautiful building by the Confederates
- D) gained its current cracks in the US Civil War
- E) has the same shape as a cup used for drinking tea with

54. It is clear from the passage that, at present,

- A) Davidson is collecting money for the restoration of the lighthouse
- B) no American Civil War-era lighthouse is in good condition
- C) no modern builder that puts up lighthouses exists
- D) Davidson is working on repairing the Sand Island Lighthouse
- E) there is not enough available money to restore the Sand Island Lighthouse

55. It is understood from the passage that Michael Davidson

- A) has seen a great many hurricanes within his lifetime
- B) dislikes the Confederate side of the US Civil War
- C) has repaired a broken teacup
- D) admires how the Sand Island Lighthouse was constructed
- E) does not believe that the Sand Island Lighthouse will be saved

66. Awakened in the middle of the night by blaring sirens, you go outside to investigate. Soon you come upon and join a small crowd, having gathered to watch a neighbour's house burn. You are struck by your own and everyone else's apparent fascination with disaster. You turn to a fellow spectator and express this:

- A) How we love to gaze at other people's misfortune!
- B) Look at those immense flames! They must be over five metres high.
- C) My God! Has anyone been hurt?
- D) What could have possibly delayed the firefighters so long?
- E) I can't stand to watch—I'm going back to bed.

67. You've done a lot of work on your balcony garden and are quite proud of it. You're talking to a friend on your balcony and are horrified to see him about to put his cigarette out in one of your pot plants. You don't want to seem too upset or unreasonable, but want to stop him before he does so. Also trying to solve his problem, almost hurriedly, you say to him:

- A) How would you feel if I put my cigarette out on your new carpet?
- B) Hey, I'll bring an ashtray for you. Use that one instead of the pot.
- C) Don't even think about it! That's no place to put out your cigarette.
- D) What do you think you're doing? Does that look like an ashtray to you?
- E) If you want to smoke, I would rather you did it in the parking lot.

68. You're at a formal function at work, and just about to introduce two of your most important clients to each other, when you suddenly realise you've forgotten the name of one of them. It's probably because you're a bit nervous, but there's nothing you can do except for trying to cover up the situation as smoothly as possible. So you say:

- A) I know you won't believe this, but I've forgotten your name, sir.
- B) Mr Horwood, may I introduce you to Mr.... Pardon, what was your name?
- C) Well, this happens rarely to me, but I don't remember either of your names.
- D) Mr Horwood, I'd like you to meet another of our valued clients.
- E) Oh, I've just seen someone I have to talk to this minute.

69. Your partner and you have just moved into a new house and are redecorating. Your partner wants to paint the living room in a shade he has chosen from a catalogue. Knowing that the colours don't always turn out exactly as they appear in catalogues, you suggest:

- A) Yes, I think that colour would be absolutely perfect. How much do we need?
- B) Oh no, that colour is far too bright, and it wouldn't go with our furniture.
- C) Why don't we get a little pot of the paint and test it on a small area first?
- D) Let's look at a few more catalogues before we make a decision.
- E) Well, if the colour doesn't look as good as you think, what are we going to do then?

70. You are in a clothes shop where the prices are quite reasonable. Your friend is trying to decide which dress to buy. She is quite sensitive about her weight. Unfortunately, she comes out of the changing room in a terrible outfit and asks your opinion. You suggest, trying not to hurt her:

- A) Take it off immediately. You look really awful.
- B) Well, it has made your excess kilos very noticeable.
- C) Have you started dieting yet?
- D) It's okay, but why don't you try this other style?
- E) It's too expensive. Let's try another shop.

Ben:

- Oh, I see. So now you want to further increase your knowledge of computers.

- A) Really, what I all need is to do some more practice on my own computer.
- B) I thought about them, but I didn't do anything.
- C) I would, but I just haven't got the time to spare.
- D) What makes you think I would have done that?
- E) I did, but that was a very basic course for beginners.

76-80. sorularda, cümleler sırasıyla okunduğunda parçanın anlam bütünlüğünü bozan cümleyi bulunuz.

76. (I) Stalactites are the long carrot-like structures that hang from the ceilings of caves. (II) They also closely resemble the appearance of icicles. (III) Nonetheless, the two objects don't have any physics in common. (IV) On the other hand, stalagmites are the similar structures found on the floor of caves. (V) That is why experts were shocked to find that both can be described using the same mathematical equation.
